

Seasonless fashion at Lost & Found

Wednesday, 11 March 2009

According to Womenswear Daily, art collectors may be the latest guardian angels of the fashion world. Such is the case for Lost & Found, a young Tuscany-based fashion label that has contracted Alain Dominique Perrin, executive director of Compagnie Financière Richemont and president of The Cartier Foundation, as an investor.

Based on seasonless clothing using artisanal techniques and natural fabrics and dyes, Canadian Ria Dunn runs the brand with her partner, Italian architect Alessandro Esteri. Its second collection is being presented at the No Season showroom in Paris this week.

Search Site

Search Google

